depends on which part of 'quality', SME, Technical writer, legal, etc.	3
our SMEs are : developers, QAs, product leaders, product managers, technical support, presales engineers	2
Nobody. They consider that the content quality is given because the contents are written by engineers...	1
QA team and dev (check for accuracy, and typos, and readability)	1
1st round of review is with my colleagues writers (we are a team of 4). Then the team of trainers, who will train clients on the product	1
Amending my answer: QA + Dev + UX usually review	1 and the SMEs for specific topics: developpers, marketing, project manager	1
The middle manager who is an engineer	0
Regulatory Department for regulatory information. But overall nobody me, as techwriter and former engineer	0
Mechanical project manager, Electrical project manager and Chief project manager	0
We're two tech writers. I'm a junior and the other tech writer is a senior. I ask her to review the "global content", otherwise the developers are making reviews for the technical aspect.	0
Final review is by Quality & Regulatory Affaires	0
As the writer, I do while I am researching/interviewing SMEs while writing. Content is already valid before before structuring it. QA/Integration/Developers often review, if they have time.	0
We share our documents on a collaborative platform and they are reviewed by SMEs and other technical writers. We use OnlyOffice	0
SMEs for technical accuracy, nobody for whether the content is easy to understand!	0
we send out PDFs and handle all comments, there is room for improvement on the process ;-)	0
Software strings: collaboration among tech writer, SME and developers.	0
Linguistic reviews and style guide application: peer reviews by other writers, information architects, UX writers, and tooling helps
Technical reviews: developers, QA, product managers	0
Documentation: lingusitic quality: tech writer. Technical content: SME and tech writer.
Writing for translation: tech writer.	0
Product managers are in charge of reviewing, but I get also feedback from our Project managers, the support team, and occasional feedback from customers is useful.	0
Apart from peers reviewing the material linguisticwise, we use a Simplified Technical English checker for customers who use this standard	0
SMEs (Product Managers) review the content / technical accuracy. Technical Writers review the quality of the writing.	0
Translators also notice errors and confusing content and they tell the writers	0
